Viterra opens new retail depot at Bordertown

Viterra has opened a new retail depot in Bordertown that will serve as a regional hub for grain marketing, agronomy, crop protection, fertiliser, seed and wool products. Growers throughout the South East will be able to access leading grain marketing and agronomic expertise through the retail depot.

Regional Sales Manager for Eastern South Australia, Bernie Seal, said local employees would be operating from the depot, highlighting the company's commitment to working directly with growers.

"Customer Relationship Managers Hayden Maher and Adam Brinkmann will be jointly based at the depot, with Adam also servicing growers in the southern Mallee region. They have a wealth of experience and knowledge which will be useful as we continue to build relationships with local growers," he said.

"The investment of the new retail depot demonstrates Viterra's commitment to the region and further strengthens the company's ability to service both grain and wool growers. Our ability to provide a complete service offering, with on-farm delivery of seed and crop protection products, is an important benefit to growers who farm in this area."

Local Wool Client Manager, Steve Grant, will also share much of his time between Viterra's Naracoorte wool store and the Bordertown depot.

Viterra's strength is built on local investments and having employees work directly with growers. Viterra continues to strive to become growers' partner of choice, through offering products and services specifically tailored to individual needs.
