Viterra welcomes Simon McDougall to the Liverpool Plains

Viterra has welcomed Simon McDougall as customer relationship manager, covering the Liverpool Plains region and based at Viterra's malting plant in Tamworth.

Simon has a strong agri-business background, having previously worked as a commodity broker and holding senior positions in the financial services sector with leading Australian banks and financial institutions.

Simon is a grain grower at Manilla and understands the nature and complexity of cropping on the Liverpool Plains region.

Working alongside fellow Viterra customer relationship managers Brendan Adler and Mary Michael, Simon is responsible for growers' grain accumulation and grain marketing requirements.

Marc Cooney, General Manager Country Sales, said Simon's appointment would further strengthen the team and the services Viterra can offer to growers on the Liverpool Plains.

"The appointment of Simon is a big plus in such a key grain region of New South Wales," Mr Cooney said.

"Simon's experience and local knowledge will undoubtedly prove useful as he works with local growers."

Viterra's customer relationship managers play a pivotal role working with growers to provide business solutions for their cropping enterprise and to provide marketing information based on daily activity in domestic and international markets.
